

OBSERVATION STAYS DENY MEDICARE BENEFICIARIES ACCESS TO SKILLED NURSING CENTER CARE

SUPPORTED BY

AAHAM

American Association of Healthcare Administrative Management

AARP

ACMA

American Case Management Association

Aging Life Care Association

AHCA

American Health Care Association

AJAS

Association of Jewish Aging Services

Alliance for Retired Americans

American College of Emergency Physicians

AMDA

The Society for Post-Acute and Long-Term Care Medicine

Catholic Health Association of the United States

Center for Medicare Advocacy

The Coalition of Geriatric Nursing Organizations

Emergency Nurses Association

The Jewish Federations of North America

Justice in Aging

Leadership Council of Aging Organizations

LeadingAge

LSA

Lutheran Services in America

Medicare Rights Center

n4a

National Association of Area Agencies on Aging

NAELA

National Academy of Elder Law Attorneys, Inc.

NAHCA

National Association of Health Care Assistants

NASL

National Association for the Support of Long Term Care

NASOP

National Association for State Long-Term Care
Ombudsman Programs

NCAL

National Center for Assisted Living

National Committee to Preserve Social Security & Medicare

The National Consumer Voice for Quality Long-Term Care

SHM

Society of Hospital Medicine

Special Needs Alliance

Medicare beneficiaries are being denied access to Medicare's skilled nursing facility (SNF) benefit because acute care hospitals are increasingly classifying their patients as outpatients receiving observation services, rather than admitting them as inpatients. Patients are called outpatients despite the fact that they may stay for many days and nights in hospital beds and receive medical and nursing care, diagnostic tests, treatments, medications, and food, just as they would if they were inpatients. Under the Medicare statute, however, patients must have an inpatient hospital stay of three or more consecutive days, not counting the day of discharge, in order to meet Medicare criteria for coverage of post-acute care in a SNF. As a result, although the care received by patients in observation status is the same as the care received by inpatients, outpatients who need follow-up care in a SNF do not qualify for Medicare coverage. Hospital stays classified as observation, regardless of their length and the type or number of services provided, are considered outpatient. These hospital stays do not currently qualify patients for Medicare-covered care in a SNF; only inpatient time counts.

Hospitals' use of observation status and the amount of time patients spend in observation status are both increasing.

A study* found a 34% increase in the ratio of observation stays to inpatient admissions between 2007 and 2009, leading the researchers to conclude that outpatient observation status was becoming a substitute for inpatient status. The same study also documented increases in long-stay outpatient status, including an 88% increase in observation stays exceeding 72 hours.

Support for counting time spent in observation status toward the three-day prior inpatient stay continues to grow.

In July 2013, the Office of the Inspector General reported that hospitals varied widely in their use of observation stays and, in calendar year 2012, that beneficiaries had 617,702 hospital stays that lasted at least three nights, but that did not include three inpatient nights. These beneficiaries did not qualify for SNF services under Medicare. The report was supportive of counting observation days towards the three-day inpatient stay minimum requirement. In addition, in September 2013, the congressionally created Long Term Care Commission recommended that the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) count time spent in observation status toward meeting the prior three-day stay requirement.

The NOTICE Act and the two-midnight rule do not resolve this problem of observation status for patients.

Beginning August 2016, the NOTICE Act requires hospitals to inform patients who are receiving observation services as an outpatient for more than 24 hours that they are outpatients, not inpatients. While receiving written and oral notice informs patients of their status, the law -- which is a positive step forward -- does not give patients hearing rights or count the time in the hospital for purposes of SNF coverage.

The two-midnight rule establishes time-based criteria for inpatient hospital status, and most importantly, authorizes physicians to order inpatient status if they believe their patient is likely to be hospitalized for two or more midnights. A revision to the rule in 2015 allows physicians, on a case-by-case basis, to order inpatient status for patients who are likely to be hospitalized for only a single midnight. While the rule and its revision reflect CMS' concerns about long outpatient stays, hospitals are unlikely to change their practices when CMS provides no meaningful guidance on when an inpatient stay of fewer than two midnights is appropriate. Physician decisions about patient status continue to be reviewed by hospitals under the same standards as before: short inpatient decisions are prioritized for review by Quality Improvement Organizations (QIOs); and the specter of audits by Recovery Auditors (still known as RACs) remains. A RAC's determination that a patient has been incorrectly classified as an inpatient requires the hospital to return most of the Medicare reimbursement for the patient's stay, despite the fact that the services were medically necessary and coverable by Medicare.

Both the NOTICE Act and the two-midnight rule reflect recognition of the problem of observation status for Medicare patients, but they are not sufficient to address the impact on SNF eligibility for beneficiaries in observation.

Legislation introduced this Congress with bipartisan support would create a full and permanent solution. The Improving Access to Medicare Coverage Act of 2015 (H.R.1571/S.843), introduced by Representatives Joe Courtney (D-CT) and Joe Heck (R-NV) and Senators Sherrod Brown (D-OH), Susan Collins (R-ME), Bill Nelson (D-FL), and Shelley Moore Capito (R-WV) would help Medicare beneficiaries who are hospitalized in observation by requiring that time spent in observation be counted towards meeting the three-day prior inpatient stay.

*Zhanlian Feng, Brad Wright and Vincent Mor, Sharp Rise In Medicare Enrollees Being Held In Hospitals For Observation Raises Concerns About Causes And Consequences, Health Affairs, 31, no.6 (2012):1251-1259